ALBAUGH's .- The descent of ability from The Effect of the Declaton in father to son is something that is not popularly believed in, and when young Emmet undertook to play the pieces that had served as a setting for his father's talents there was a great deal of doubt expressed as to the outcome. He has not challenged comparison with his father, The so-called "army and navy clause," reand it would therefore be useless and uncalled for to measure him by his distinguished prede cessor. He has preserved the simple, dainty men holding honorable discharges from the army and navy, is blotted out by the decision melodies, the pretty touches of humor and th of the United States Supreme Court in the Hutton case, published in THE STAR yesterday. delicate appeals to pathos that have always con stituted so great a charm with a performance with which the name of Fritz is connected For several years the complaints of the police authorities as to the embarrassments they met German found a graceful impersonator in the young actor. Mr. Emmet has a great deal in his favor. He is prepossessing in ap-pearance, the resemblance to his father off as well as on the stage being something wonder-ful, he is easy in his movements and has pro-pourced musical talents. The size of the avon account of this law in their efforts to obtain suitable men for the force, and the comments of officials and others on the prejudicial effect the operation of the law had on the character of the force, have been growing more and more emphatic. The persons whom the law when enacted was intended to benefit, the veteran soldiers and intended to benefit, the veteran soldiers and sailors of the war, no longer derived any benefit from it, and the police department was forced to turn for recruits to the men who had enlisted and been discharged from the army and navy in recent years. That the decision yesterday was gratifying to the police authorities it is hardly necessary to say.

The Hutton suit, as stated, was for $182.50, with interest from June 6 to August 20 1890. with interest from June 6 to August 20, 1890. Hutton was appointed on the force as a civilian, having neither an army or navy record, and his appointment was made to test the question as to whether the Commissioners could appoint of the performers. LeCoq's opera is not a familiar work to most theatre-goers, and the

When the accounts reached the first controller he declined to sanction it and suit was en-tered by Hutton for his pay. The Supreme Court of the District sustained the action of Court of the District sustained the action of the Commissioners in making the appointment and the case was then taken to the Suprome Court of the United States.

THE ONLY QUESTION. The question in the case was whether paragraph 354 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia, prescribing the qualifications of persons eligible for appointment on the police force, was repealed by the act of June 11, 1878. Paragraph 354 was the one which made an honorable discharge from the army and navy a prerequisite to being a policeman and the act of 1878 was the one establishing the present form of government of the District of

The court in delivering the opinion referred to the Eckloff case, stating that the Supreme Court of the District was right in its decision, and continued: "Moreover, the reasons actuating Congress in 1867 in requiring the District minutes amid such tumultuous applause as has never been heard in that place of amusement. It was the occasion of the first appearance of Litt and Davis' naval drama, in five acts, "The Ensign," by Wm. Haworth, and surely no play ever received a more vociferous and popular introduction than "The Ensiga" did. The house was full from ceiling to orchestra rail, and the very first act caught them and never let go. The plot hinges on the charged soldiers and sailors did not exist, at least in the same degree, in 1878. When this qualificational provision was first enacted the war had not been long ended, and it was but in harmony with the general liberal policy of the government of the United States toward those who had fought in its army and navy that a discrimination should be made in their favor in the matter of appointments to various places of trust in the nation's capital. Their appointment on the police force would serve also to imbue that force with at least some of the precision and atten-tion in detail found in all well-regulated military companies that have seen actual service. But in 1878 the war had been over a number of years and those who participated in its struggles were growing old and were becoming less able physically to perform all the duties of a mem-ber of the police force.

"Under these conditions it is entirely con-sistent with the policy of Congress to hold that they intended to abolish the qualificational

A CHANCE FOR CIVILIAN APPLICANTS. Now that the decision has been rendered the civilians who have been applicants for appointcivilians who have been applicants for appointment on the force for a number of years will no doubt put in new applications and the files will be filled in the course of a short time.

It is feared by some that the decision giving, as it does, the power of appointment at will, will operate in the future to make the force a political machine unless the necessary safeguards are established at the outset and the rule requiring residence in the District is strictly adhered to.

MAJ. MOORE'S COMMENTS. Maj. Moore, speaking to a STAR reporter this the best thing that could have happened for the police force. For the past two years it has the police force. For the past two years it has been difficult to fill the vacancies, especially those created by legislation. It took two or three months to get thirty men when Congress provided for that additional number. Now men can be taken not because of their honorable discharge from the army or navy, but because they are particularly adapted to police work. It seems to me that it will be well to require at least three vacances. he appears. Although twenty-four hours had not elapsed since the decision of the Supreme Court was rendered two members of Congress called upon rendered two members of Congress called upon the police authorities today and made requests for the appointment of constituents of theirs on the force. Their requests recalled an inci-dent that occurred several years ago, when a member of Congress called in person and urged the appointment of a man who was then on the police force of a city in the state where the Congressman resided. When the Commis-sioner to whom application was made called attention to the fact that there was a rule re-quiring a two years' residence here the Conquiring a two years' residence here the Con-gressman stated that as this was a rule and not a law it could be set aside. THE DISTRICT IN CONGRESS. How Gen. Casey Says the Aqueduct Tunnel Can Be Made Serviceable.

The squeduct tunnel can be completed and made serviceable, says Gen. Casey, chief of engineers, in response to a resolution of the Senate offered by Senator Sherman. Before it is completed, though, there should be some test as to the water-holding capacity of the brick stricting appointments on the police force to cylinder. The test will cost $20,000. Should t result satisfactorily the entire work could be ompleted for $640,000. Ger. Casey says it is racticable to place iron pipes in the tunnel and thus convey water to the new reservoir, but he does not think the proposition is a good one because of the difficulty there would be in getting at the pipes. He suggests the laying of two forty-eight-inch mains over the route suggested by the board of experts. The Court in General Term yesterday decided he question brought before it from the Probate plied with the terms of the general act relating to the incorporation of such companies should be required to give bond as an administrator. Chief Justice Bingham, who delivered the opinion, said that it appeared that the companies interested had been at the time of the passage of the act organized and engaged in business under the laws of various states. When the act was passed they complied with the law so as to proceed with business under its provisions. The law prescribed that no bond should be required of companies incorporated under the provisions of the act. The question was whether the companies existing at the time the act went into force and which came under its provisions by complying with its terms should be considered as being exempted from giving bond under this clause. The court had no doubt that such companies were included in the clause and that they were to be considered as incorporated under the act. plied with the terms of the general act relating

The "Kemble Jackson" Check. To the Editor of The Evening Star: Will you a permit a few words in answer to the letter in your issue of the 29th ultimo, signed "Horse," which says:

"Many horses have to be driven with the check-rein or the overdraw, and wherefor? If a horse travels low in front he will stumble sooner or later. A stumbling horse is an abomination and cannot be cured unless he is checked high."

We have heard this argument used, but we have heard this argument used, but never by any one who had any but the most superficial knowledge of the horse and none at all of his anatomy. The horse is one of the most beautiful of animals. Job says: "Hast Thou given the horse strength? Hast Thou clothed his neck with thunder?"

We clothe his neck with thunder?" We clothe his neck with an instrument of torture, which pulls his nose up and out on a level with his ears and prevents him from closing his mouth, thereby forcing him to breathe through the lips rather than the nostrils. The continued pressure hardens his mouth and finally the natural and beautiful arch of the INCORPORATION LAW AMENDED.

House bill 2785, enacted by the House January 26, passed the Senate yesterday. It amends the general incorporation law of the District attached to the head and neck, are by tight checking prevented from fully exercising their functions, so that the horse's speed and strength. as well as his boauty of form and grace of mo-tion, are impaired. The muscles of the hips, loins and lumbar regions are also seriously af-Now it will not be easily seen how a contrivburse it. He says he was counsel for the winningmen and at his request Senator Cullom introduced a bill which may or may not result head check and the process of muscle crippling continued until stiffened and half paralyzed, I can bring to my support the testimony of the best veterinary surgeons of our own country and of England, but I shall be content to quote from the "Trotting Horse of America," which board of audit of the District of Columbia and from the "Trotting Horse of America," which of the sewerage certificates authorized by the was written by Hıram Woodruff, who trained and rode and drove to victory some of our most famous trotters and was esteemed as the great-

ace capable of causing so much mischief car

est horseman of his day.

Mr. Woodruff says: 'In order that a fast horse should be under circumstances to do his best he should be as much at his ease in his harbest he should be as much at his ease in his harness and general rig as possible. If he is not he is placed at almost as much disadvantage as if sore or stiff or suffering from some bodily ailment. You may see horses brought out of the stable to trot with a very tight check to keep the head up and a tight martingale to keep it down. Such a horse is in irons, and when to this is added a dead drag at the reins and no movement of the bit from end to end I and no movement of the bit from end to end I cannot see how he should do his best."

The overhead check was invented not to prevent stumbling, but to keep the trotting horse "Kemble Jackson" from throwing his head down between his legs when he broke. Mr. Woodruff says of it: "It answered well in this particular case and mark the state of the state particular case and must always be of great use in similar ones, but I think it is often applied in cases where it is not only unnecessary, but does harm instead of good."

I am sure the great horseman would be sufficiently punished for introducing this rein, which he only intended for special cases, if he could see the use to which it is put every day to our streets. February 1, 1892.

A Dissolution of Partnership Sought. Catherine A. Brashears seeks a dissolution of artnership, account, &c., in a bill against largaret Kenelly, filed by Chase Roys. She states that they formed a copartnership in September, 1876, to conduct a notion and dry goods store at 71 G street northwest, and charges that in June, 1888, the defendant and her sister Bridget forcibly expelled her from the premises, telling her to go work for her living, after she had put $1,330 in the business. states that she then went to a friend's house Court as to whether a trust company that com-plied with the terms of the general act relating her marriage has resided here.

Verdict in a Slander Case. Yesterday in the Circuit Court the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $2,750 in the case of Wm. Williams and wife against Ellen keynolds, alias Wolff, in which the latter was charged with slander in saying that Mrs. Wil-liams was a thief and had committed larceny.
